Acknowledgments

This dissertation is the product of two years of work, during which I benefited from the help of numerous people.

First and foremost, I wish to thank my thesis advisors, Professors Ana Lúcia Santos and Inês Duarte, whose rigorous readings and criticism of the many versions of the experimental task and this dissertation were essential to their development. Their contribution to the final form of this work is inestimable: this dissertation would not be anything close to what it is without all the time and consideration they have given to it. I have learned (and continue to learn) how to do research in linguistics from them.

I am also indebted to Fundação para a Ciência e Tecnologia, Centro de Linguística da Universidade de Lisboa, to the research group ANAGRAMA and to everyone in the project CLAP – Complement Clauses in the Acquisition of Portuguese for granting me the opportunity to work in a research project and develop this dissertation within that project. It was due to the project CLAP that I have developed an interest on language acquisition, and I intend to continue to work in this area in the future. Also, the daily contact with the reality of academic research work I have had throughout the past two years and a half had an important positive impact on this dissertation and on my own growth as a graduate student and aspiring researcher.

This work would not have been possible without the children who participated in the experimental task and their parents, as well as the adult participants who make up the control group. I would like to convey my appreciation to them. I am also very thankful to the directors, coordinators and educators who received us so well in all the institutions that collaborated with the data collection for this thesis work: Jardim-de-infância SASUL – Serviços de Ação Social da Universidade de Lisboa, Jardim-de-infância Os Letrinhas, Externato da Luz, Centro Social da Paróquia de S. Sebastião da Pedreira, and Jardim de Infância APIST – Associação de Pais do Instituto Superior Técnico. I also wish to thank all the people who generously gave their time to help me collect the data: Alice de Jesus, Catarina Correia, Aida Cardoso, Filomena Gamas, Silvana Abalada and Isabel Alves. To everyone who made available all the necessary materials for my experimental task, I would like to convey many thanks.

This work has been presented in a number of conferences and talks, and I am indebted to everyone who made contributions. This dissertation has benefited greatly from them. I would also like to thank everyone who provided access to bibliography I would otherwise not have been able to use.

On the personal side, I wish to thank Filomena Gamas for her friendship, and for her unshakable trust in my work. I cannot thank Alice de Jesus enough for her friendship and companionship, as well as for being so available to discuss any issues pertaining to my thesis work. I am also thankful to João Vaz, that excellent conversationalist, for clarifying various doubts. And to the friends who saw me disappear for a while, I promise I will try not to do that again.

I am indebted to Anabela Soares, my dearest aunt, for going to great lengths to support my goals.

Last but not least, I wish to thank my mother, Ercelina Tavares Mendes, for her unwavering support.
